MONTHLY PORTFOLIO UPDATE

MARKETS UPDATE

All major global equity markets generated strong, positive returns in October. The Emerging Markets region generated the best return of 5.9%, followed by Global Equities that returned 4.5%. Investors in Australian equities enjoyed a return of 4.0%.

The best performing market for the month was Japan with a return of 8.1%. Economic conditions in Japan have improved, with the economy expanding for five straight quarters, and a rise in personal consumption and export growth over the last year. There are improvements in corporate governance as an important driver of profitability and increased returns to shareholders, as corporations are gradually starting to focus on governance issues, including increasing dividends and share buybacks under urging from the government and other stake-holders.

The US equities market returned 4.3% and appears to be on a strong upward trend. Investors had expected they would sell off if expectations for tax cuts and other fiscal policy initiatives diminished. However, even as the market has undergone a significant rotation, with so-called Trump trades fully reversing, the equity bull market has continued to run. The market has been propelled by improved earnings prospects, as the consensus now expects double-digit earnings growth in 2017 and 2018 following two years of flat earnings.

The major European markets of France and Germany returned 3.3% and 3.1% respectively. While political risks remain, and will continue to usher in uncertainty, the prospects for economies, earnings growth, and currencies, in recent months have seen improvements. Political risks in the Eurozone have moderated considerably this year with the defeat of populists in Dutch elections in March and the election of the staunchly pro-European Emmanuel Macron as France's president.

Of the major economies, the UK posted the lowest return of 1.6%. Political and economic risks in the United Kingdom, in contrast, appear to be on the rise. The loss of the Conservative party majority in Parliament in the June 7 snap election called by Prime Minister Theresa May in a failed effort to increase her party's majority has raised uncertainty regarding "Brexit" negotiations.

Domestically the local stock market returned a healthy 4.0% for October and in early November reached 6,000 points. A high point not seen since the Global Financial Crisis of 2008/09. Domestic economic growth and employment data is encouraging and various business surveys of confidence and conditions are at high levels. The RBA's tone has been positive, noting the outlook for the non-mining sector has improved recently.

PORTFOLIO UPDATE

The Contango Global Growth portfolio (ASX code: CQG) returned a solid 4.4% for the month of October 2017. The return was in-line with the benchmark index, the MSCI All Country World Index ex-Australia return. Impressively, the portfolio returned 9.2% for the 3 months to October, outperforming the benchmark by 0.2%. All returns are reported in Australian dollars and unhedged.

The Company's investment strategy is managed actively by the Investment Advisor and provides investors with exposure to a high conviction, actively managed global portfolio of leading quality high growth companies. The portfolio is invested in both developed markets and emerging markets companies and has a bias to be invested in growth companies in the technology, healthcare and consumer sectors.

The portfolio benefited from its exposure to emerging markets equities of 14.8%, as these markets returned 5.9% outperforming developed markets by close to 1.4%. Even after a strong year, the valuations of emerging markets are more attractive than for developed markets and their economic growth continues to be strong. The portfolio's allocations to developed markets, emerging markets and cash were unchanged relative to the prior month of September.

The Company's policy is to maintain a fully unhedged portfolio that exposes the portfolio to foreign currency movements. A depreciation in the AUD relative to other currencies benefits the portfolio's value but an AUD appreciation detracts value. Currency movements had a positive impact on the portfolio's value for October as the AUD depreciated by 2.3% against the USD, to end the month at USD 0.766.

It was a good month for investors in equities, with global equity markets generating a solid return of 4.5% in October and modestly outperforming Australian equities that returned 4.0%. All major global equity markets generated positive returns. The best performing market was Japan that was up 8.1%, followed by the US with a return of 4.3%. The major European markets of France and Germany returned 3.3% and 3.1% respectively. The UK posted the lowest return of 1.6%, as that country continues to be plagued by a weakening economy and on-going Brexit negotiations with the European Union. Of the emerging markets, India returned 6.1% and China 1.3%.

The portfolio is well diversified being invested in 15 countries around the world and invested in 9 industries. The largest single country exposure is the USA with a holding of 50.9% and 47.9% is spread across Europe, Canada, Asia and South America. The portfolio maintains significant investments in the growing industry sectors of technology 24.4%, healthcare 18.3% and consumer discretionary 16.9%. The portfolio has nil allocations to telecom services and utilities - the lowest returning sectors.

PORTFOLIO OUTLOOK

The Investment Adviser is pragmatic about their investments in technology companies as their deep experience informs them to be wary of environments where investor confidence is highly optimistic about future growth prospects far into the future. The technology companies held in the portfolio have significant advantages of broad and growing economic moats that are difficult for competitors to breach. However, eventually, their growth must slow from current high rates at some point in the future because of their market dominance and competitive pressures from new technological advancements. This is not expected to occur any time soon. The Investment Adviser manages these risks by being vigilant to re-fresh the portfolio with new companies that they evaluate to have resilient competitive advantages and sustainable long-term growth and at the same time being careful about the price paid and position sizing when selecting new companies for the portfolio.

One emerging threat to fast growing technology companies is a substantial change of tax or regulatory policy. In the September quarter, Google was fined US$2.7billion by the European Commission's antitrust authorities for anti-competitive practices and lost a Russian court case involving its competitive practices and it has been excluded from China since 2010. Uber was banned in September from operating in London, and in other markets where opposition to its business model has gained government backing. Facebook has seen its WhatsApp operations banned in China.

Facebook is also facing criticism for allowing its platform to be exploited by groups to organize and foment violence in Charlottesville, USA and by Russian saboteurs to influence the US election in 2016. US President Donald Trump has said (via Twitter) that Amazon's destruction of brick-and-mortar retailer businesses could face government reprisal, while European Commission officials have urged a review of its tax practices within Europe. Companies held in the portfolio counter regulation threat by global and product diversification of their business models. Additional potential threats include: a withdrawal of liquidity through monetary policy tightening, the onset of a recession, or the onset of hostilities.
